The Oxfordshire Historic Landscape Characterisation Project was carried out by Charlotte Malone (2012-2015) and Dr Abi Tompkins (2016-2017) on behalf of Oxfordshire County Council. The author would like to thank Charlotte for the huge amount of work she put into the design of the project and the herculean effort put into the digitisation of most of the county.

Foremost thanks must also go to Historic England (English Heritage at the commencement of the project), who commissioned and fully funded the Oxfordshire HLC. Particular thanks go to the Project Assurance Officer, Peter Herring, for his constant support, invaluable suggestions, and his unrivalled knowledge of HLC. Thanks also go to Roger Thomas for his local expertise and support throughout the course of the project, Graham Fairclough for the Project Design, and Caroline Howarth for her advice on the submission of the final report and archive.

This project would not have been possible without the support of a range of colleagues within Oxfordshire County Council. Chief amongst these were the Archaeology Team. The management and support given by Susan Lisk, Historic Environment Record Officer, were greatly appreciated, as was the advice and expertise from Hugh Coddington and Richard Oram. Many thanks should also go to Anne Kearsley, Niall Grieve, and Gary Bowers whose hard work made the wonderful online interactive map possible, and Paul Smith, Jonathan Pyke, and Suzanne White who significantly increased public awareness of the project through an excellent media campaign.

Through a series of meetings, the Oxfordshire HLC project was guided and shaped by a group of stakeholders whose input cannot be overemphasised. Of particular note were those stakeholders from organisations who contributed HLC data from earlier projects: Oxford City Council, the Chiltern Hills AONB, and the North Wessex Downs AONB. The author would also like to give special thanks to Ben Wallace (Warwickshire HER Officer and former HLC Officer) and Tom Sunley (Wiltshire HER Officer and former HLC Officer). The completion of the final phases of the project would not have been possible without their assistance.

It has been a pleasure to be able to hold an exhibition inspired by the Oxfordshire HLC, bringing the project to a wider public audience and increasing engagement with a range of users. The author would like to thank The Oxfordshire Museum, Woodstock and the Oxfordshire Museum Service for hosting the exhibition and supporting the event. David Moon, Curator of Archaeology, in particular, who facilitated the event and offered his expertise generously. The author would also like to thank Romola Parish, Miranda Creswell and Phil and Jim's Art Club, and Lorna Robinson and the Rumble Museum, without whom there would not have been an exhibition. Their creativity and novel engagement with the HLC has been inspiring.

Finally, the author would like to thank Paul Booth, Chris Tompkins, John Pouncett, Emma Bolster, and Richard Oram for permission to use their photographs within this report and archive.
